The first Attempt at a Toronto Railway, 1836, which ultimately failed due to funding, largely because of the economic conditions as a result of the 1837 rebellion.

REPORT

SELECT COMMITTEE

OF THE

Honourable the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada,

ON THE PETITION OF THE

TORONTO AND LAKE HURON

RAIL ROAD COMPANY.

Montreal, February, 1845.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of the Toronto and Lake Huron Rail Road Company, beg leave to represent, that by an Act of the Parliament of Upper Canada, passed on the 10th day of April, 1836, the said Company was incorporated, with power to construct an iron or wooden Rail Road or way, between the City of Toronto and some portion of the navigable waters of Lake Huron, within the limits of the Home District.

That stock to a very large amount was taken up, and the Company provided with the necessary surveys, and had plans and specifications of the entire route made and completed at a very heavy expense. The undertaking having thus been commenced, with every prospect of success, the unhappy troubles of 1837 began, and owing to the depressed state of the country consequent thereon, your petitioners state they were compelled to abandon their intentions for some time; but that within the last twelve months public attention has been called to the subject, and that it has been suggested to them that a Planked or Blocked Road would better suit the present circumstances of the country. That it would at the same time have an almost equal tendency to develope its resources. That a Rail Road would mainly depend for support on foreign travel and traffic, whilst a Planked or Blocked Road would be of immediate benefit to the districts and counties through which it might pass. That it would be much less expensive, and might be brought into use at a much earlier period.

In this view of the case, your petitioners pray for an amendment in their Act of incorporation, so as to put it in their power, if they think fit, to construct a Planked or Blocked Road, or a Rail Road in their discretion, which your Committee beg leave to recommend to the favourable consideration of your honourable House.

Your Committee beg leave also to recommend, in pursuance of the prayer of the petitioners, that the said Act may be farther amended, by leaving it in the discretion of the said Company, to fix the terminus of the proposed Road to Lake Huron, at such point as they may deem most advisable, without confining it to the Home District, and that the time limited for the completion of the said Road, which will expire in less than two years, be extended to a period of four years.

Rupert's Land, territories adjacent to Hudson Bay grant to the Hudson's Bay Co in 1670 by King Charles II. Rupert's Land was defined as all lands drained by Hudson Bay - today's Prairie provinces, northern Ontario, northwestern Quebec, and portions of the North-West Territories. Canada purchased Rupert's Land in 1869 and that acquisition sparked off the Red River Rebellion..

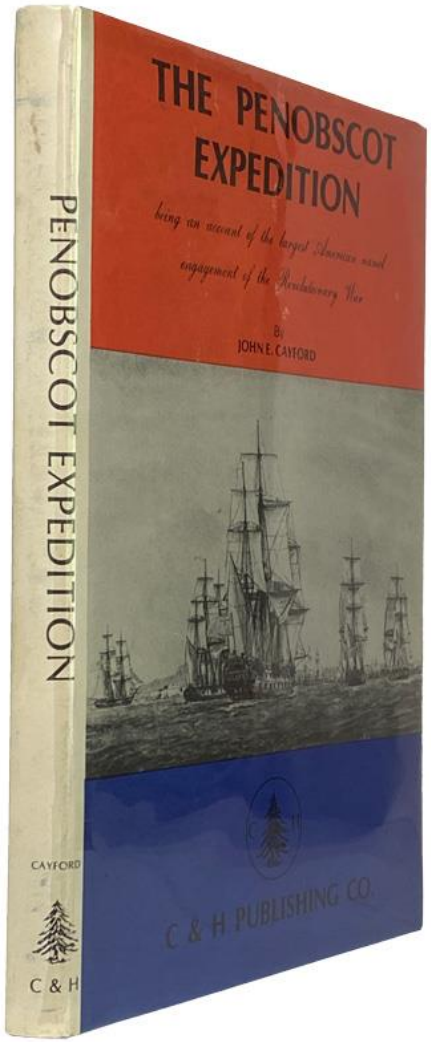

Among Cartier's achievements immediately following confederation, may be placed the negotiations that he conducted and the measures he had passed to extend Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It was mainly Cartier who was the moving spirit behind the advance westwards; this was something in which he took great pride, but in which, in retrospect, he also saw a few flaws. In October 1868 Cartier and one of his government colleagues, William McDougall*, went to London to negotiate the acquisition of Rupert's Land and the North-West Territory. As McDougall fell ill, the whole burden of the discussions with the British government and the Hudson's Bay Company fell on Cartier alone. He remained in London until April 1869, and had the opportunity to mingle in the political and social life of the capital. Finally, at the beginning of spring, the British government made the company a proposal by which it would receive £300,000 for its territory and retain one-twentieth of the fertile belt. The shareholders accepted the offer, and Cartier returned to Canada in triumph, his negotiations having added more than a quarter of North America to the territory of Canada. At the end of May Cartier had approved by parliament the agreement concluded with the imperial government and the Hudson's Bay Company (32–33 Vict., c.3); when the imperial parliament had in its turn ratified the agreement, the territories were officially joined to Canada on 23 June 1870. It was then necessary to organize these vast spaces, and create political and administrative cadres for the some 10,000 Métis, the descendants of Indians and French and Scotch white people, who lived in the Red River region. The Canadian government had made a clumsy attempt to occupy the new territory and already in the autumn of 1869 had found itself up against resistance from the Métis and from a provisional government directed by Louis Riel. It was Cartier who succeeded in negotiating a solution with Bishop Taché that satisfied most of the Métis' requests, and that took concrete shape in May 1870 with the creation of a new province, Manitoba, which was given a political and administrative system analogous to that of Quebec (33 Vict., c.3). The Métis were guaranteed land; the rights of the two languages were recognized, and the schools of the religious minorities, whether they existed by virtue of law or of custom, were authorized.

It is also to Cartier that we owe in large part the entry of British Columbia into the Canadian confederation. During the spring of 1871, in the absence of John A. Macdonald, who was sick, he obtained the Canadian parliament's approval for the address seeking the establishment of a sixth Canadian province, in return for the promise that it would be linked with the rest of Canada by a railway through the Rockies. "Before very long," Cartier exclaimed prophetically, "the English traveller who lands at Halifax will be able within five or six days to cover half a continent inhabited by British subjects." This became possible in 1885. The government, not wishing itself to build the railway, decided to entrust the responsibility for it to a company, to which in return it would ensure subsidies and grant blocks of land. In the spring of 1872, Cartier introduced a bill in the House of Commons that provided for the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway (35 Vict., c.71). It was at the time of the adoption of this bill that Cartier gave the exultant cry: "All aboard for the West!" DCB.

From the Renaissance to well into the nineteenth century, finely crafted, scientifically valuable, and aesthetically sumptuous terrestrial and celestial globes held a place of honour in the libraries and cabinets of curiosities of the aristocracy, wealthy merchants, and centres of research and learning. Over the past thirty years the Stewart Museum at the Fort in Montreal has assembled one of North America's most important collections of these now-rare and fascinating objects. In Sphæræ Mundi Edward Dahl and Jean-François Gauvin tell the stories of these globes, explaining their iconography and introducing us to the most important European globe makers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Première roman & italic, romanin & italique. the first Canadian type for text composition - designed by by CARL DAIR to mark the Centenary of Canadian Confederation. le premier caractére canadien pur la compsition du texte ~ créé par CARL DAIR à l'occasion du Centenaire de la Confédération. Toronto. Cape & Company Limited. [1966]. folio, 33.3cm, Printed in a limited edition of 250 copies, no. 180 [ms]., by courtesy of ... Cape ... [16]p., in two sheets, rubricated title and text, red string tied, in blue green linen over boards, gilt spine title, fine ~ WITH: Dair's signed presentation on his business card laid in on the front paste down endpaper, to Bob Leslie with the deepest respect!, Carl Dair 500.00

We have only seen one other copy which was in wraps and out of series.

First Edition, Limitation not stated. Commissioned by the Governor-General of Canada-In-Council, the first proof of the Cartier typeface was created in Roman and Italic faces to celebrate the centenary of Canadian Confederation. It was named after the explorer Jacques Cartier. The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms was set in the Cartier typeface. The typeface had largely fallen out of use in the late 1990s, when Rod McDonald redesigned Cartier for a digital audience. "Cartier, the distinctive new type-face designed in Canada by Carl Dair is an event of great moment, almost unique in our history. This design is, in fact, Canada's first text type created for the twenty-six letter alphabet. Not since 1841 at Norway House when James Evans fashioned his Cree syllabic symbols has Canada developed its own original type. Here is legibility, invention, style, and beauty from the mind and hand of a great Canadian talent. Carl Dair has spent ten years designing Cartier. His work constitutes a centennial gift to all Canadians, indeed, to all people, for all time." - Douglas Lochhead.

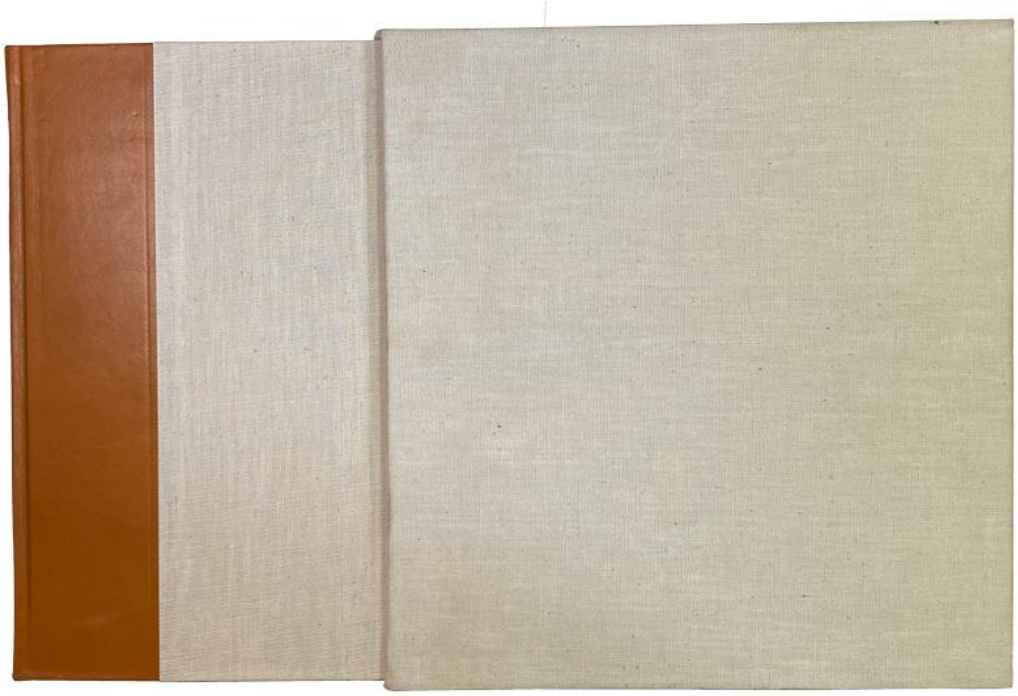

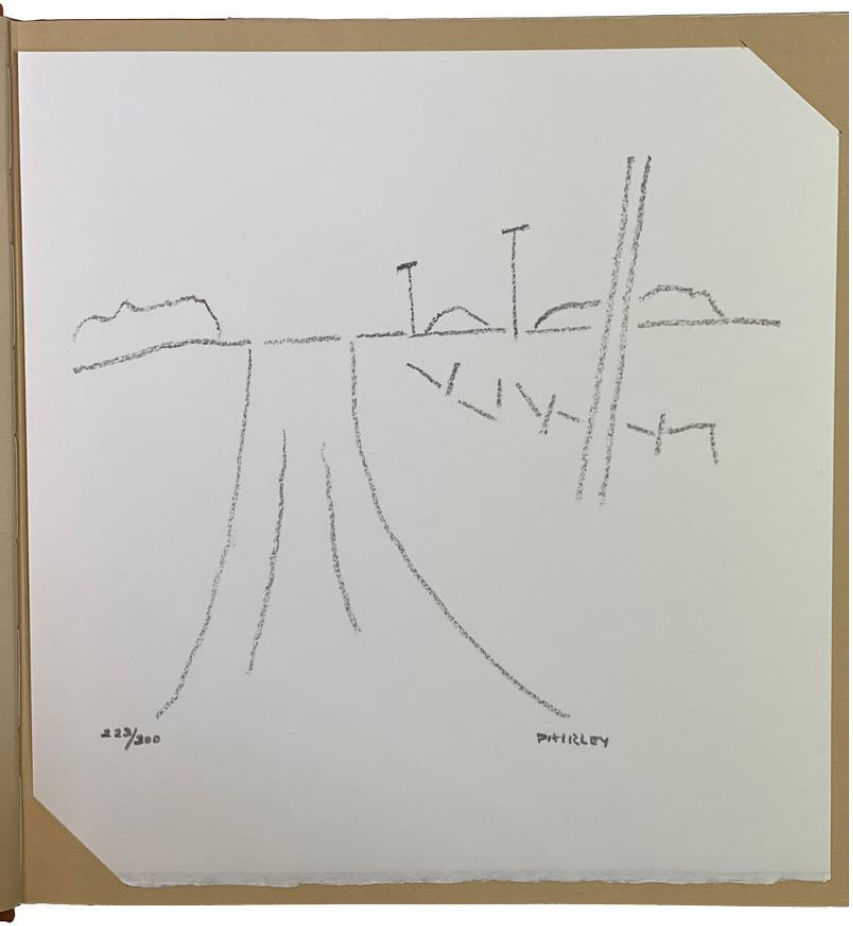

I am very proud to say that in 1966 I was a student of Carl Dair at Ontario College of Art. He quietly got our attention and I believe we all left that year's classes with a new sense of the art of typography and respect for Dair.

21. FAIRLEY, Barker by Paul Duval.

Barker Fairley. Toronto. Marianne Friedland Gallery Limited. 1980. square folio, 31.5x 29.5cm,m xii,149,[1]p., “This book was printed in a limited edition of 300 numbered and signed copies, plus 25 copies hors commerce. This volume is number 223. Signed by Barker Fairley & Paul Duval, on the front free fly, with 2 slip mounted graphite drawings, numbered and signed, Fairley. Illustrated throughout in full page plate illustrations in colour and monochrome, bound in quarter light brown calf, gilt spine titles, linen boards, in full matched linen slipcase, both in fine condition, uncommon 750.00

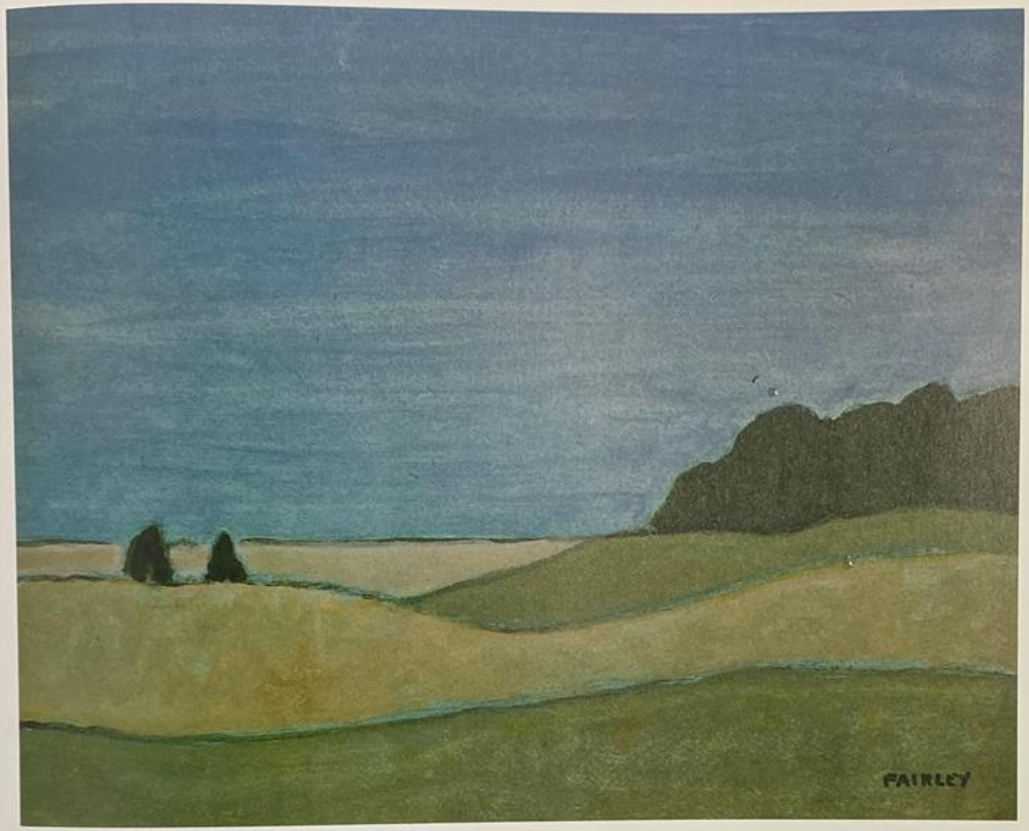

Barker Fairley, OC RCA (May 21, 1887 – October 11, 1986) was a British-Canadian painter, and scholar who made a significant contribution to the study of German literature, particularly for the work of Goethe, and was an early champion and friend of the Group of Seven. Although educated and brought up in a strong European tradition and background, Fairley's important life's scholarship in German literature and art criticism was done in Canada and was about Canadian art and Canadian culture. His perspective and writings strongly influenced a burgeoning academic and artistic culture in his new chosen home. He was born in Barnsley, Yorkshire and died, a Canadian citizen, in his home in Toronto, Ontario, Canada. He was educated at Leeds, and in 1907 was granted a Ph.D. from Jena University in Germany. His first academic appointment was at Jena. Between 1910 and 1915, he joined the faculty at the newly founded University of Alberta in Edmonton. He joined the University of Toronto's German department in 1915 where he taught until the end of his career as a professor.

In 1949, he was invited to Bryn Mawr College to deliver lectures on the German poet Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, but was barred entry by the U.S. Department of Justice. He later compiled the texts of the abortive lectures into six essays on Faust. He retired in 1957.In 1978, he was made an Officer of the Order of Canada for his "unique contribution to Canadian scholarship". Barker Fairley spent almost all of his professional artistic life in Ontario, where he was also mentor and teacher to Charles Meanwell and Vincent Thomas. Many of his paintings are still owned by the University of Toronto and are in the Art Museum, University of Toronto, Hart House collection. He began to paint in 1931 through the encouragement of Robert Finch. In his use of colour and form, the effect of the Group of Seven is quite evident. His critical approach and activism regarding the Group of Seven contributed to their acceptance in Canadian Art, and his scholarly influence over University College at the University of Toronto left a strong and lasting impression.

What is needed then ... is to set the whole subject matter of art free and not just the landscape part of it. It is the human subject, the human face, the human figure whether alone or in groups or in crowds, in town and country, in war in peace, in life and death, that is the real and central subject of art .... — "What is Wrong with Canadian Art" Canadian Art magazine, Autumn 1948

History of the Ottawa Valley. A Collection of Facts, Events and Reminiscences for over half a century. Ottawa. The Author. 1896. 8vo, 22cm, first edition, 288p., black cloth, gilt spine titles, text is toned as usual, produced on fragile paper, a fine copy, unusual thus 100.00

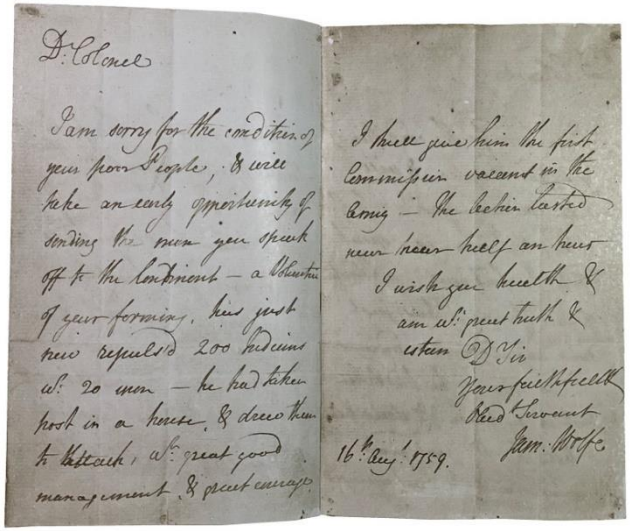

Gourlay, a clergyman, was born in Tryone in Ireland, 1821-1904. He came to Canada in 1834 and was educated at Knox College, Toronto and at Princeton University. He was ordained as a Presbyterian minister in 1851. After several posts in the United States he spent his later years at Aylmer, Quebec.

Example from p82-3. "... Not far from Wilson's, some of whose descendants we have met on the Gatineau. dwelt the Cathcart family, distantly allied to the heroic general who had both limbs off in the great battle in the Crimea, and by hos own request was lifted from his horse, and set on a piece of disabled cannon, that he might give commands while he lived. He was a descendant of the famous warrior in the days of peerless Nelson of imperishable memory. These Cathcarts, too had seen service at Lundy's Lane and elsewhere, and their enemies never discovered that they had backs".

T.P.L. 8507. Lada- Mocarski 145. Sabin 43073. Cf. Arctic Bib. 10563 (for 2nd ed.). Smith 6232. - Based on the logs and journals of Capt. Robert Le M. M'Clure, [McClure; Maclure], who commanded the expedition, this book tells the story of the final achievement of the long and devoted quest for the North-West Passage. The Investigator accompanied the Enterprise, under Commander Collinson, to search for Sir John Franklin. The narrative describes the perils of the ice in the Beaufort Sea, contains remarks on the progress of the Franklin Search, and a great deal of detailed information on Arctic wildlife. The Investigator also explored Banks Island, penetrated Prince of Wales Strait and spent three winters imprisoned by ice on the north shore of Banks Island. Here they were met in April, 1853, by a party from the Resolute (M'Dougall), which was anchored 160 miles away east of Melville Island. The Investigator's crew sledged to the Resolute and returned eastward with its crew to England, thus completing the first ocean to ocean passage north of America.

Leaving Fort Chipewyan on Lake Athabaska in 1789, Mackenzie set out for the Arctic Sea on the river now bearing his name, and returned the same year. In 1793 he again set out, this time for the Pacific. He and his party worked their way up the Peace River, the Parsnip River, crossed the Continental Divide, and discovered the Fraser River. They travelled down the Fraser for a bit and then struck overland," they reached and crossed the Coast Ranges, reached the Bella Coola River which they descended, and found themselves at the river's mouth in a tidal inlet of the Pacific, thus completing the first overland journey, north of Mexico, across North America.

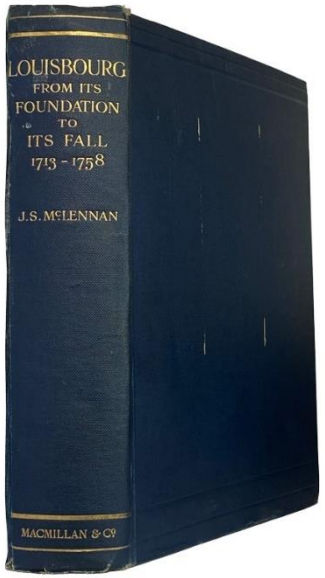

Many of the nineteenth-century explorers who followed in Mackenzie 's tracks found his accuracy remarkable. These two expeditions were undertaken on behalf of the North West Company in its attempt to break the monopoly of the fur trade held by the Hudson's Bay Company. .

This book is considered by many historians to be the most valuable history of the war which caused the complete destruction of French power on the North American continent. Mante, an officer engineer, did not see any service in the war until its last year, but he was a well-informed historian and his writings are distinguished for their accuracy and general impartiality. His history gives an account of the causes which led to the war, a detailed narrative of all its military operations. He also includes two subsequent campaigns against the Indians, the last being an original narrative of Pontiac's War.

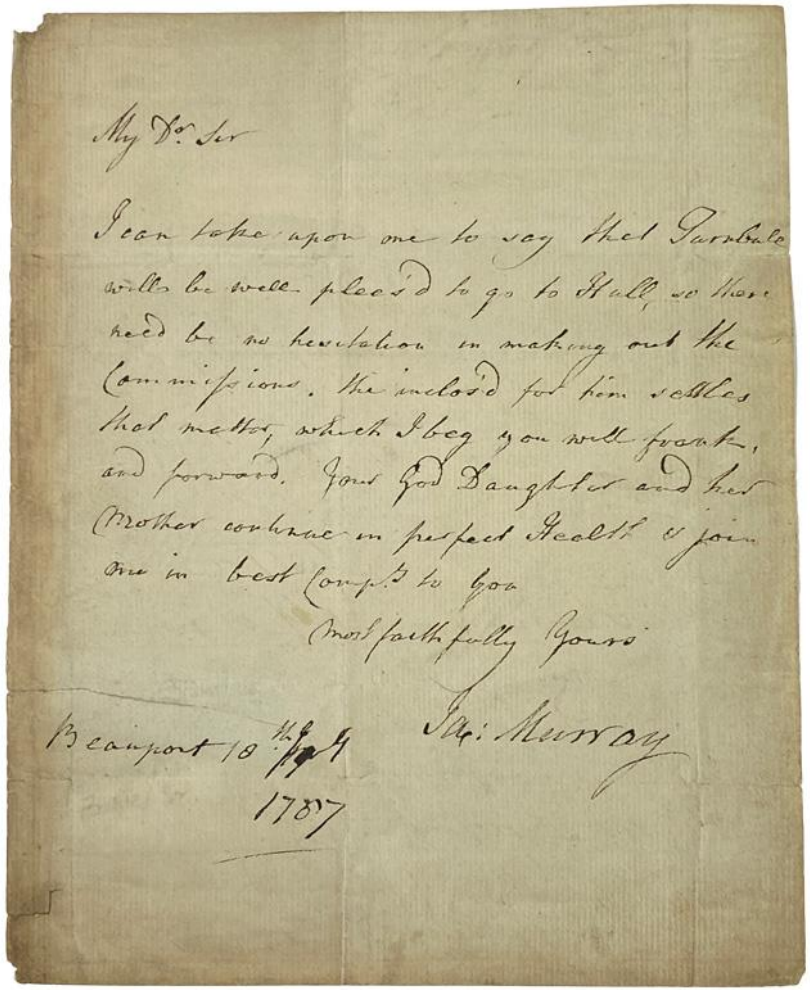

The maps and plans show: Fort Beau Séjour; Lake Ontario; Lake George; the Fort Edward communication system between Albany and Oswego; part of Cape Breton Island; the attack on Fort Ticonderoga; Fort Pitt; Guadaloupe, the attach on Quebec; the Cherokee Country, the St. Lawrence River from Montreal to the Island of St. Barnaby; Martinique; St. Lucia; the attack on Havana; the retaking of Newfoundland. Few copies of this work contain all the fine, large maps and plans. (Lande).

"Best contemporary chronicle of this war; including detailed accounts of the frontier campaigns under Washington, Braddock, Amherst, Bradstreet, Bouquet, et al." - Gephart 5012. "Thomas Mante assistant engineer during the siege of the Havana, and Major of a brigade in the campaign of 1764". (Howes). The first edition is very rare.

Although recipient of letter is unknown, James Murray, then Governor of Hull (Yorkshire) was writing from his retirement home, Beauport House near Battle in Sussex. General Murray was prominent in the capture of Louisburg, the Battle of the Plains of Abraham (1759) and commanded in the Battle of Ste. Foy and siege of Quebec (1760). Following the capitulation of the French, Murray held the position of Governor of Canada. He was relieved of this position in 1766 since he was considered too lenient to the French Canadians.

37. [PHOTOGRAPHS]. Vancouver, Fishing Industry.

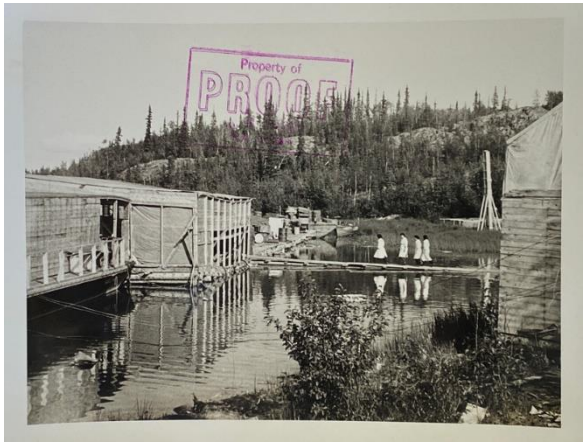

Thirty-four large photographs of a West Coast fishing packing plant near Vancouver (McGinnis) circa 1940. All aspects of the factory are displayed particularly workers, who appear to be oriental & children, accommodations, fishing boats, boats ("Nor Alta" & "Nor Basta") and shipping. A 1940's truck is pictured & scenes of CN & CP Rail. No specific title is given but a barge is named "McGinnis, Vancouver B.C.".

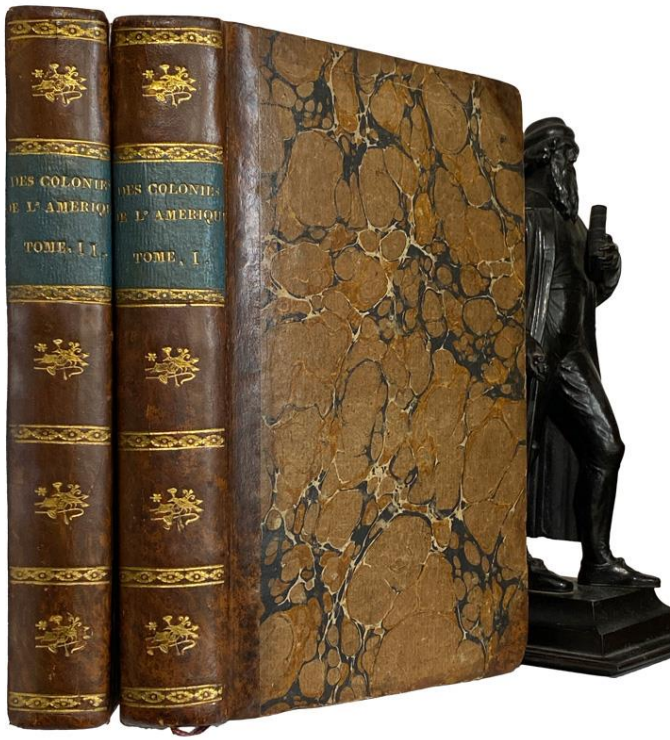

The 34 black & white photos each measure 16x 20cm (6" x 8"). All are a bit cupped on the vertical edge, ring-bind holes on the top margin. The images are very clear with excellent contrast and are professional. Most are stamped in red "PROOF. Property of W.H. Delight RA 5434 ". RA is of legal interest standing for Republic Act 5434; an Appeals Court for Agrarian and Immigration issues. Are the photos supplying visual proof that McGinnis had employment issues. 400.00

M. de Pradt was archbishop of Mechelen (Malines) and Poitiers, chaplain to Napoleon, French ambassador to Warsaw, and a prolific political author. In this work, Pradt discusses the monetary and commercial consequences of colonial revolutions to Great Britain and the European countries that have a stake in lands abroad. He touches on the French colonies and the slave trade, as well as the expansion and prosperity of the United States after independence.

The Long Journey to the Country of The Hurons. By Father Gabriel Sagard. Edited with Introduction and Notes by George W. Wrong, and Translated into English by H.H. Langton. The Champlain Society, No. 25. Toronto. 1939. 24cm, xlvii,411p. with 4 plates & 2 maps, limited to 550 copies, this being #360, original crested red cloth, t.e.g., a very good to fine copy 500.00

Sagard, a Recollet, left Paris in March, 1623, for Canada. He remained in the Huron country a few months then returned to France. He is the authority on the first Recollet mission 1615-29, and, with Champlain, the principal source of non-Jesuit information on Indian life and relations with the French, before Le Clerq. (TPL).

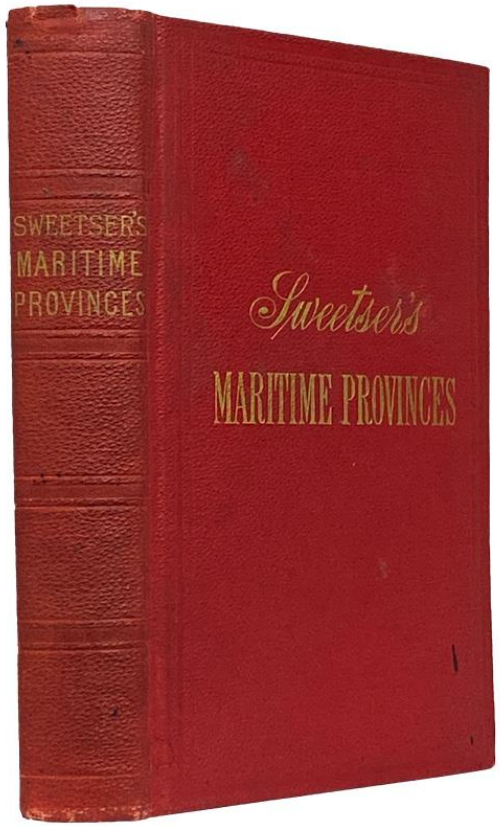

Published in 1632 in two volumes, Le grand voyage du pays des Hurons recounted Recollet friar and missionary Gabriel Sagard's journey to the Huron nation in 1623-24. The Society considers this bilingual edition the completion of a trilogy on the early history of the French in Canada, which it had begun with six volumes of Champlain's Works and three volumes devoted to Marc Lescarbot's Histoire de la Nouvelle France. Sagard had never before been translated into English.

45. THOMPSON, David

The Writings of David Thompson. Volume 1. The Travels, 1850 Version. Volume 2. The Travels, 1848 Version, and Associated Texts. Edited with an Introduction by William E. Moreau. Toronto. The Champlain Society. 2009/2015. 8vo., 23cm, in 2 volumes, lxiv352,[v,i] & xliii,[3],384pp., many maps (several folding) and plates, biblio., index, crested red cloth, private bookplate, as new 100.00

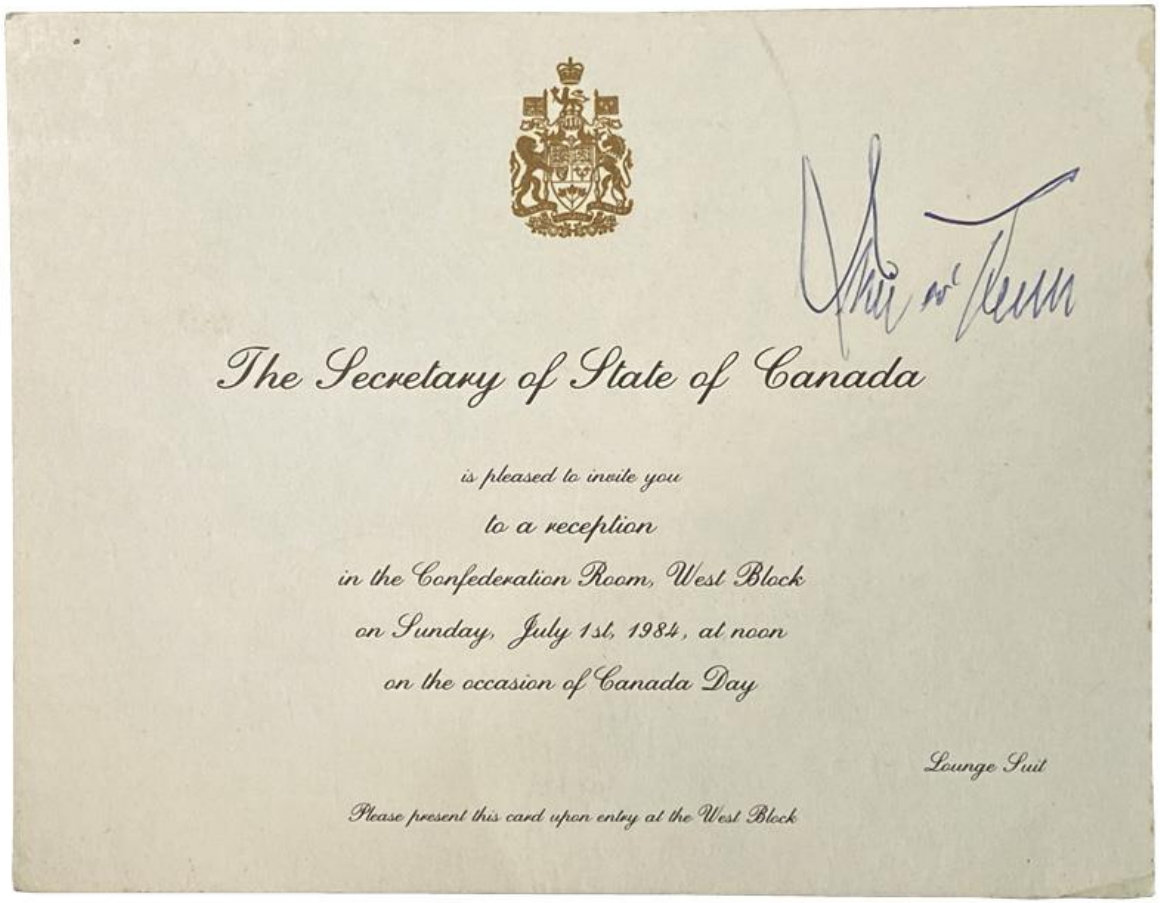

Between 1784 and 1812, David Thompson travelled and traded over a vast expanse of western North America, from Athabasca to the Missouri, and from Superior to the Columbia's mouth. Later in his long life, the great surveyor and fur trader told the story of these years in an animated autobiographical narrative he called his Travels. A spectacular geographical journey, and a spirited intellectual one as well, the Travels is one of the finest early expressions of the Canadian experience. The work is not only the story of a remarkable life in the fur trade but is also an extended meditation on the land and the Indigenous peoples of western North America. A distinguished literary work, the Travels alternates between the expository prose of the scientist, and the vivid language of the storyteller, and is animated throughout by a restless spirit of inquiry and sense of wonder.

In addition to an entirely new transcription of Thompson’s complete manuscript, the volumes include historical and textual introductions, extensive critical annotations, biographical appendices, and historical and modern maps. Now updated and with a new preface by the distinguished geographer John Warkentin, this edition continues to bring David Thompson and his world to new generations of readers, and to serve as the standard scholarly reference for this foundational Canadian work.

The photogravure frontis. portrait of Whitman in 1880 is first published here in the First Edition, one of 500 copies. However, "Few were sold, the balance being bound up in light blue cloth, some without portraits."

Shay, p. 39. According to Wells, p. 44, only "a few were bound in vellum boards".

Whitman left America only once, in the summer of 1880, shortly after a journey to the western United States. He spent four months in Canada. He did so at the invitation of Dr. Richard Maurice Bucke, a fervent admirer who was much taken with the poet's mystical attributes.

Sabin 103994. Howes W-419. Rostove 353.B2. Cowan, p249. - The Expedition under the command of Lieut. Charles Wilkes (1798-1877) consisted of six ships and lasted from 1838 to 1842, logging 87,000 miles, surveying 280 Pacific Islands, creating 180 charts (some still used in WWII), surveyed 800 miles of the Pacific Northwest (of what would become Oregon and Washington states). Amazingly, in fragile wooden boats, the Expedition charted 1500 miles of the Antarctic Continent which still today bears the name "Wilkes Land". The scientists with the Expedition are noted as bringing back over forty tons of artifacts and specimens that would become the foundation of the Smithsonian Institution. One of the lasting minor legacies of the voyage was by a seaman on the Expedition, Charles Erskine who wrote "Twenty Years Before the Mast" in 1890 (see Rostove 116). Although a mere lieutenant in command of the Expedition, Wilkes was eventually promoted to admiral in the U.S. Navy. The U.S. Exploring Expedition had great significance for the United States establishing it as a major naval and scientific power throughout the world.

50. [WILMOT, Allan Lemuel] (MUNROE, H. Reeves)

A New Brunswick Patriot. Theme: The Life and Times of The Honourable Allan Wilmot. Manuscript. N.d. probably 1940's ??., 4to. 26x 22 cm, hand-written, 16p. single-sided sheets, oval photographic portrait of Wilmot on front cover, card covers with triple clips, some light chipping to covers, very good 50.00

A hand-written school essay. A prominent New Brunswick judge and politician, Allan Wilmot was the first Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick after Confederation. ~ This would be an ideal item to display in a glass case at a school or munifcaply library. The McLaughlin Library, at the University of Guelph had truth windows as you walk along the corridor to the library entrance... how exciting to see McKenzie Voyage 1801, or a Hearne 1791.
