T.P.L. Lande Gagnon. Sabin... 83421. Howes S-631. Gephart. Revolutionary American, A Bibliography. # 7806.

John Andrè, 1751-1780. British soldier, son of Genevese ( the French-speaking part of Switzerland) parents. Joined Royal Fusiliers in Canada (1774); aide-de-camp to General Grey and Sir Henry Clinton; made adjutant general by Clinton, with rank of major. Appointed to negotiate with Benedict Arnold for betrayal of West Point to the British; captured by Americans while returning toward New York in civilian clothes with negotiation papers in his boots; hanged as a spy.

'The portrait of Andrè was engraved by Hopwood, probably from the print by J.K. Sherwin. Letters from Andrè to Miss Seaward written in 1769 are included on pp.336-357. This book was published by Mr Smith to justify his own character against the charge of being involved in the Arnold Treason.'

One of the series "The Canadian Historical Studies. A Library of Historical Research" with a Foreword by General Editor, Lorne Pierce. Amherst's "Journal" of 18 volumes was discovered only in 1925, and Dr. Webster has presented the portion, volumes 8 to 18, that deal with Amherst's service in America. The siege of Louisbourg, the capture of Forts Ticonderoga and Crown Point, the occupation of Montreal are covered as well as his tenure as Governor General of British North America from 1760 to 1763.

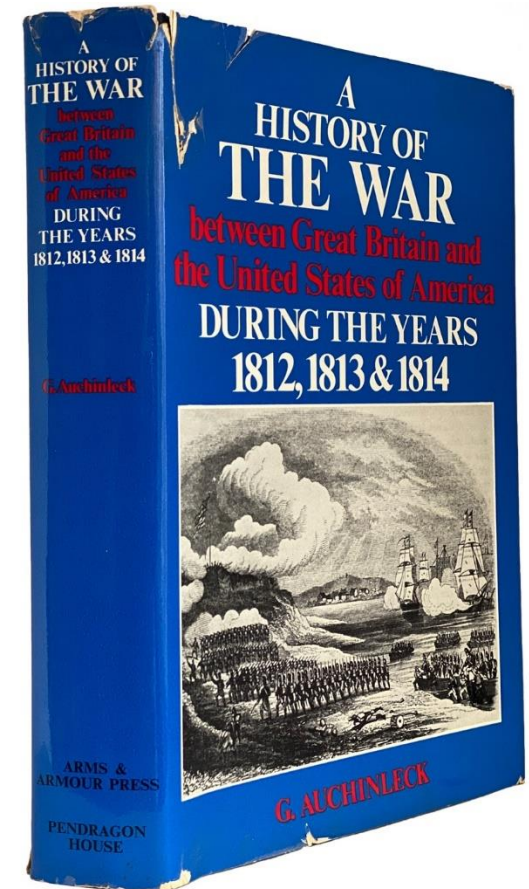

The British Invasion from the North; Digby's Journal of the Campaigns of Generals Carleton and Burgoyne from Canada, 1776-1777, with the Journal of Lieut. William Digby.

3. AUCHINLECK G.

A History of the War Between Great Britain and the United States of America. During The Years 1812, 1813 & 1814. With an Introduction by H.C. Campbell, Chief Librarian, Toronto Public Libraries. Toronto & Redwood City, Calif. Arms and Armour Press... 1972. 8vo, 23.5cm, vii,408,iii,p., frontis & folding map, facsimile of the first title page, blue cloth, gilt spine titles, near fine in edge frayed jacket 75.00

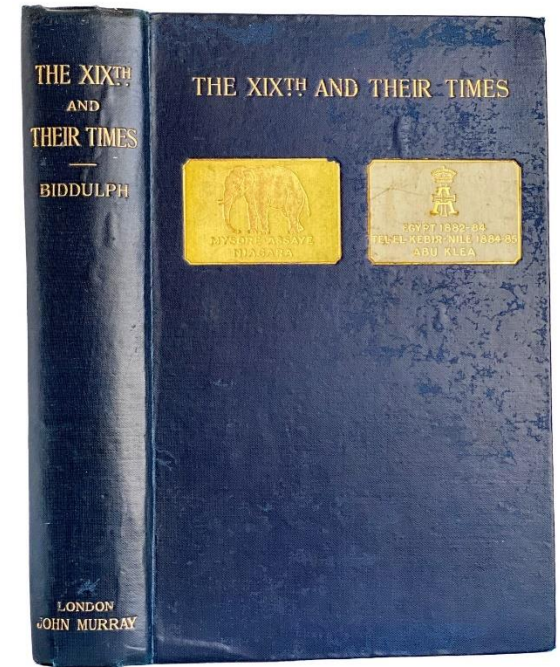

Facsimile reprint of the first edition of 1855, published in Toronto by Maclear & Co. - Smith 26. It was first serialized in 26 parts in the Anglo-American Magazine (1853-1855). - Includes manuscript and printed documentary materials in the text and appendix. Despite the author's declaration of an impartial examination, his account is strongly biased in favor of the British." British bias is a common observation in Smith. War of 1812, An Annotated Bibliography. Despite that it is still a useful bibliography.

11. BURGOYNE, Lieutenant-General

A State of the Expedition from Canada, as laid before the House of Commons, by ... with a Collection of Authentic Documents, and An Addition of Many Circumstances Which were Prevented From Appearing Before The House by the Prorogation of Parliament. Written and Collected by Himself, and Dedicated to the Officers of the Army He Commanded. The Second Edition. London. Printed for J. Almon. 1780. 8vo, 21cm, 2nd edition, ix,[1], (advertisement), 191,[1],cix,p., with 6 engraved folding maps, ( 5 with some colour outlining), (map 5 overlay expanded view hinge on), folding table, in contemporary full tan calf, gilt panel rules, crushed crimson morocco label, gilt roll decoration on the board edges, upper hinge restored, some slight edge wear, very good to fine copy 3,800.00

The six folding maps include, the actions at Huberton; the attack at Walmscock; the encampment at Swords House; Braemus Height; the position at Saratoga; and a general map of Lake Champlain and district entitled: 'Map of the Country in which the Army under Lt.-General Burgoyne acted in the Campaign of 1777, showing the Marches of the Army & the Places of principal Actions. Drawn by Mr. Medcalfe". Also includes the narrative of Lieutenant-General Sir William Howe in a committee of the House of Commons on 29 April, 1779, relative to his conduct during his command of the King's troops in North America.

Concerning this work the Monthly Review: "General Burgoyne writes well. His very interesting story is told in a masterly manner, and the materials of which it is composed will be held in great estimation by historians, who shall record the events of the unhappy war, to which they owe their birth". (Lande).

T.P.L. 503. Lande 69. Sabin 9255. Streeter 794 (first edition). Howes B-968. "Denied a professional examination of my conduct, and disappointed of a parliamentary one", Burgoyne here defends his actions in the northern campaign of 1777, against the criticism in parliament and press which followed his capitulation at Saratoga" (TPL).

The most important source for information about Burgoyne's campaign during the Revolutionary War. He presents to the House of Commons his defense of his conduct as the commander of the British expedition down the Hudson Valley from Canada in 1777. The expedition ended in disaster at Saratoga, where nearly 20,000 American forces under Gen. Gates soundly defeated Burgoyne's army of 5,000 and forced his surrender. He points out he had requested a force of 12,000 men, to achieve what had been asked of him. The excellent maps are by William Faden.

Howes C-499. Sabin 13751. The finger pointing after the withdrawal of British forces from the American colonies was exemplified by the war of words between Clinton and Cornwallis. Clinton had been head of His Majesty's forces in 1781, and was based in New York; Cornwallis was his second, in command of the southern forces. Clinton had ordered Cornwallis to not leave Georgia, but contradictory orders and circumstances encouraged Cornwallis to take his forces north, where he and Clinton were to combine armies. Delaying actions by the Americans including Cowpens and Guilford Court House forced Cornwallis to encamp at Yorktown, where Clinton's forces were to arrive, coming down the Chesapeake from Head of Elk; the recent arrival of French troop ships which anchored at the southern end of the Bay prevented Clinton from sailing directly. The British forces were thus divided and unable to connect or communicate, and an American siege at Yorktown forced Cornwallis to capitulate, ending the conflict. Clinton defended his conduct in print in early 1783, Cornwallis replied, Clinton returned the favor (present title), and the war of words and honor was on. Clinton came from a military family, while Cornwallis had the advantage of peerage, a distinction never lost on Clinton, who had heard the rumors and felt he had to protect whatever honor he had left. Regardless of who was at greater fault, Clinton's military and political career after 1781 was negligible, while within a few years Cornwallis was appointed governor-general of India.

An important history of the Seven Years' War, including the French War and the Indigenous people in North America. Entick was an English historian and author of several works on British history in the 18th century. The work narrates the events that occurred between 1756 and 1763 to establish control over Silesia and for colonial supremacy in North America and India mainly between France and Great Britain. The war involved the vast majority of the great powers of the time, having affected Europe, North America, Central America, the west coast of Africa, India, and the Philippines. It is considered the first large-scale war fought on several continents, and the main global conflict prior to the Napoleonic Wars and the two World Wars. The folded maps include a map of North America, a map of the West Indies, a map of the East Indies, and a plan of the Siege of Quebec.

“These volumes contain many portraits and maps of the period, and chiefly concern the war in America. ... (Lande). "Containing many interesting particulars relative to the Catabaw, Cherokee, Chickesaw, Delaware, and other tribes of Indians" (Sabin). The text provides a history of the French and Indian War, with considerable material on the war in North America. This detailed work contains extracts from original source material and journals of the time. Many excellent engraved portraits of military leaders include Sir William Johnson, William Pitt, Generals Townshend, Kingsley, Wolfe, Montcalm, Amherst, and Lord Viscount Howe, Admirals Pocock, Boscawen, Hawke, Saunders and Keppel. The folding maps include several of the British North American colonies, a plan of the siege of Quebec, the West Indies, etc.

Diary of the American War. A Hessian Journal. ... Field Jager Corps. Translated and Edited by Joseph P. Tustin. New Haven and London. Yale University Press. 1979. Tall8vo, 25.2cm, xxxi,467p., with frontis portrait & 36 maps, (inc 1 double page map), notes, bibliography, index, cream coloured fine greain textured cloth, back stamped spine titles, a fine copy in complete very good (some chipping on the spine panel) jacket

150.00

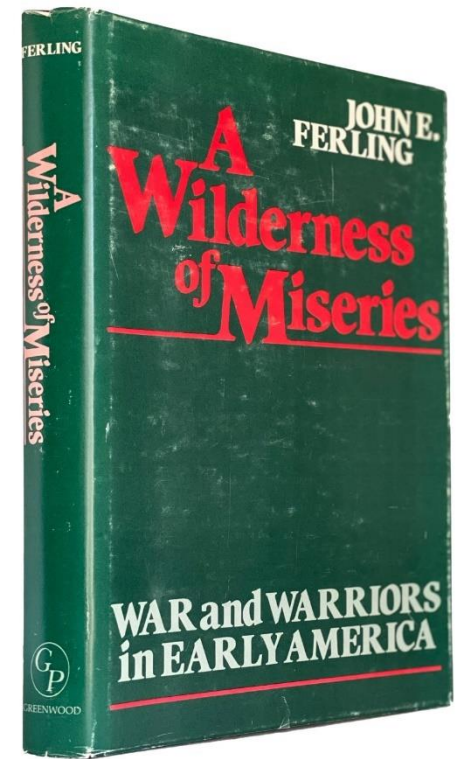

"Probably the most detailed journal kept by anyone on any side during the American Revolution," said historian Franklin B. Wickwire. Ewald was a captain with the field jager corps sent to America, and served in most of the major engagements of the British army from the New York campaign of 1776, the Philadelphia campaign of 1777, the fall of Charleston in 1780, and operations in Virginia that culminated in the siege of Yorktown, and his subsequent capture. Ewald's engaging account provides insights into British strategy, impressions of the American military, and irregular small-unit tactics during the war. Contents clean and bright with 30 black-and-white maps by Ewald, and appended love letters to an American, Jeannette Van Horne. Ewald's military experiences in America led to his 1785 Treatise on Partisan Warfare. Among the best military journals of the war.

“Historical novel from the point of view of a British soldier, ... 1776. A good picture of the British army and a commentary on the causes of the Revolution”. - Coan. America in Fiction, p132. - Considered by some to be among the best fictionalized account of the Revolutionary War, it is based on Sargeant Lamb’s journal. “I had written it as faith memoir of interesting events, not shrinking from any confession of error or boast of success, so long as I should keep to the truth”. Lamb. - “All that readers of an historical novel can fairly ask from the author is an assurance that he has nowhere wilfully falsified geography, chronology, or characters and that the information contained in it is accurate enough to add without discount to their general stock of history. ...”. The best contemporary authority on the death of Wolfe and the conquest of Canada. Knox, an Irishman, served in America from 1757 to 1760 with the 43rd Regiment of Foot. His journal written mostly at the time, and finished almost as soon as the events it contains, is one of the most accurate and detailed accounts available on the sieges of Louisbourg and Quebec. This journal is a blunt, full, interesting, and a matter of fact record of events from day to day. It is candid and reliable and has furnished materials for all subsequent writers. The military and naval orders are singularly valuable for the light they throw upon the operations of war as it was conducted at the time by both armies

Giving A Daily Narrative of His Military Service as An Officer of The Regiment of Royal Welch Fusiliers During the Years 1775-1781 in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York. Cambridge, Mass. Harvard University Press. 1930. 8vo, 24cm, in 2 volumes, vii,[1],311 & [-314]-736pp., frontis portrait, with 9 maps (7 folding), on laid paper, index, original maroon cloth, gilt spine titles, t.e.g., some slight wear on the edges, some pages unopened, two pages have a short tear on the top margin otherwise a very good sound set, rare 500.00

Volume 1: includes, Boston, 1775; Long Island, 1776; Long Island, 1777; Newport, Rhode Island, 1778.

Volume 2: R. Island, 1778; New York, 1781; New York, 1781; New York, 1781.

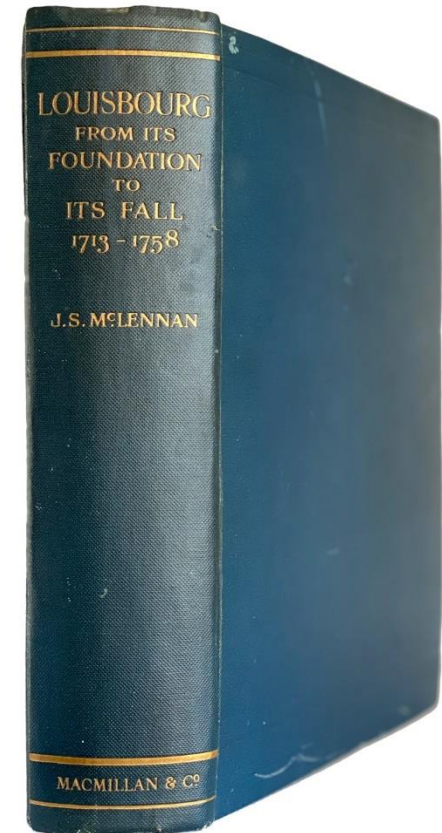

Part of this diary, describing the events at Lexington and Concord on April 19, 1775, was published a few years ago under the title "A British Fusilier in Revolutionary Boston." The present volume includes that section as well as all the remainder of the remarkable diary kept between 1775 and 1781 by Frederick Mackenzie; it is printed without editing. The diarist's entries include details of what happened in and round Rhode Island in the years 1776 and 1778, a detailed description of the events in New York during the twelve months from January to December, 1781, and reports received at headquarters during that time regarding the doings of the fleet and the campaign farther south that culminated in the surrender of Cornwallis. Mackenzie records his facts in a notably impersonal way; his cool-headedness, his judiciousness, his competence as a soldier, his keenness as an observer, and his dry exactness of style inspire the reader with the greatest confidence and make his one of the best British diaries of the Revolutionary period.

A rare separately-issued plan depicting a key battle of the American Revolution. 25,000.00

Nebenzahl. Bibliography of Printed Battle Plans of the American Revolution, 1775-1796. - #108.

"Shows approaches to Brooklyn Heights, position of the Americans, and movements of British fleet in New York Harbour. Positions of British and American units are indicated from beginning to end of the Battle of Long Island. - Relief shown by hachures" (parallel lines used on maps to shade in hills, their closeness indicating steepness of gradient). (Nebenzahl).

Published just weeks after the battle, this plan documents the British landing and the Battle of Long Island up to and including the American retreat to Brooklyn, placing these in the broader geographic context of the greater New York area. The coverage extends from Courtland on the Hudson in the North to Sandy Hook and Middletown, New Jersey in the South, depicting towns and settlements, major topographical features, and roads and residences. Major military positions and events of the Battle are shown, including the assembled British fleet and the Americans entrenched on Long Island and Manhattan, the initial British landing, and the diversionary thrusts and flanking maneuver that routed the Continental Army.

The plan states that it is "from the surveys of Major [Samuel] Holland," who since 1764 had been Surveyor General of the Northern District of North America. In fact it strongly resembles and is probably based on the depiction of the region on The Provinces of New York, and New Jersey; with part of Pennsylvania and the Governments of Trois Rivieres and Montreal. This map was first published by Thomas Jefferys in 1768 with credit to Holland as the mapmaker, then updated and reissued by Sayer and Bennett in 1775-76.

58. NORTON, John

The Journal of Major John Norton, 1816. Edited with Introduction and Notes by Carl F. Klinck and James J. Talman. Toronto. The Champlain Society, No. 46. 1970. 24cm, cxxiv,391p. with a colour frontis portrait and 3 maps, limited to 850 copies, this being #352, original crested red cloth, t.e.g., label cleanly removed from spine, else fine 100.00

John Norton (Teyoninhokarawen) (born 1770, Scotland (?)- died 1827, Upper Canada)[1] was adopted by the Mohawk at about age 30 at their major reserve in Canada. After deserting the British military in the late 18th century, he became a military leader of Iroquois warriors in the War of 1812 on behalf of Great Britain against the United States. Commissioned as a major, he led warriors from the Six Nations of the Grand River into battle against American invaders at Queenston Heights, Stoney Creek, and Chippawa.

Likely born and educated in Scotland, he had a Scottish mother and a Cherokee father. His father was born in Keowee circa 1740, and was saved by British soldiers when they burned the town during the Anglo-Cherokee War. They took him to England and placed him with an English family. As an adult with the baptized surname Norton, he married a Scottish woman, with who he had a son with.

The junior John Norton joined the British Army, serving in Ireland before being assigned to Lower Canada after the American Revolutionary War. While there he became interested in the Six Nations of Grand River, ultimately learning the Mohawk language and culture, and being adopted into a family of the tribe. In 1804 on a diplomatic trip representing the Iroquois to England, he translated the Gospel of John into Mohawk for the British and Foreign Bible Society. This work was distributed in Upper Canada beginning in 1806.

Norton traveled in the American Southeast in 1809-1810, visiting many Cherokee towns and meeting some of his father's relatives. He documented much about Cherokee culture and included this material in his journal, which primarily recounted events of the War of 1812. It is unique for his perspective on the war as an acculturated Mohawk raised in the British Isles. The memoir, The Journal of Major John Norton, 1816, was not published until 1970 in an annotated edition by The Champlain Society; other annotated versions have also been published, including the Society's 2011 version. T.P.L 6586. Sabin 64707. Howes P516. Streeter II;1033. Lande 716. Dionne 849. Vlach 599. - First edition of the most important French authority on the Seven Years War in North America. Pouchot, an engineer and a soldier, was entrusted with rebuilding the defenses of Fort Niagara, where he became commandant. Although he considered the fort impregnable, he was forced to surrender to Sir William Johnson in July, 1759. After an exchange of prisoners, he was put in charge of Fort Levis where he capitulated to the superior forces of General Amherst in July, 1760. Upon his return to France, he was accused of having shared in the corruption which led to the loss of Canada. These memoirs were written with the motives of self vindication and are an invaluable record of the War, especially of the sieges of Fort Niagara and Fort Levis. In them he discusses the corruption in the colonial administration, the morale of the French troops, as well as giving a lengthy and detailed account of the topography of Canada, of the modes of Indian warfare, and of the manners and customs of the Indians.

The engraved maps include a plan of Fort Niagara and Pouchot's defences; a map of part of the St. Lawrence River showing Fort Levis and the adjacent islands with the position of Lord Amherst's flotilla; and a large map of the entire French and English frontier from Montreal to Fort Du Quesne. Unobtrusive inked annotations, probably 19th century, on the large map appear to indicate part of the campaign studied by a previously unidentified owner. They highlight the route from Lake Ontario to Montreal. Also, there are several neatly inked marginalia toward the end of volume II, where the battle at Fort Levis is described by Pouchot. The notes contradict Pouchot by citing references to Mante and other contemporary writers.

The Military Guide for Young Officers. Parade, Camp, Field Duty; Manoeuvres, Standing and General Orders; Warrants, Regulations, Returns; Tables, Forms, Extracts from Military Acts; Battles, Sieges, Forts, Ports, Military Dictionary, &c' with Twenty-Five Maps and Copper Plates.

London. Printed for J. Millan, near Whitehall. 1781. thick8vo. 21cm, The 3rd Edition, with additions, [ii],363.[1].(pub ad); [177]pp., with 18 leaves of plates and plans, (including 5 folding), woodcut illustrations in text, in full contemporary tree calf rebaced, new dark crushed crimson label with wide gilt borders, engraved armorial bookplate, a fine clean copy, attractively bound 900.00

The third edition; with the addition of the regulations of H.R.H. the late Duke of Cumberland, &c. in Germany and Scotland. Pages [1-177] are the military, historical, and explanatory dictionary.

An eighteenth-century military treatise that was considered necessary reading for all British Army officers in the period. Covering all military evolutions and drill, the text supplied a basic need but also extended knowledge into strategy and tactics. It addressed the contemporary question of attack by column as versus line, a controversial subject and one that is credited with much of Napoleon's success. The book was well read in the period preceding the American Revolution and was adopted as reference by the American colonial armies. It was reprinted for their use in Philadelphia in 1776, in 2 volumes, by J Humphrey, R. Bell and R. Aitkin, Booksellers and Printers. (Sabin 569). An influential military guide for both sides of the American Revolution, it is much valued in present day by the re-enactment community.

Includes a Map of North and South America, ...Africa, ...Asia, ...Europe, Plan of Action The Allied Army and the French Army.

Nebenzahl. Battle Plans of the American Revolution. #60. (the later state, dated 3 February 1787, as published), 83, 90, 92, 197 ("this well-engraved map [of the siege of Yorktown in Virginia] conveys considerable useful information"); this book has great value, especially because it contains many documents that cannot be found elsewhere without great labor" (Church).

Tarleton's is the standard work on the Southern campaigns in the American Revolution. He was the commander of a Tory cavalry unit, the British Legion, and served in America from May 1776 through the siege of Yorktown. He was renowned for his brutal tactics and hard-riding attacks. The plans illustrate the siege of Charleston, the battles of Camden and Guildford and the siege of Yorktown. The large folding map depicts the marches of Lord Cornwallis in the Carolinas, with Virginia, Maryland and Delaware Counties.
